Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

Under Secretary of State Welles said something worth while when he stated some weeks ago that the United States was not specially interested in the statements of Japanese, but did take notice of what they were doing, or words to that effect. This reminds us of the many advantages of shirt-sleeve diplomacy. On the other hand we always have been a bit suspicious of the diplomacy that wears frock coats and silk hats. Perhaps it is just an association of ideas, but we fancy that most of the mistakes in diplomacy that have led to the rise of dictators were made by gentlemen wearing kid gloves and pearl gray spats.

Of course, this is a bit figurative. But we do like to see our statesmen, once in awhile say something in blunt, plain English that carries its plain meaning directly to the foreign power addressed. If the worst comes to the worst in the Pacific, at least the Japanese, who are by no means stupid, can remember they had ample warning that under a given set of conditions there would be a given result. They may profess to think our protests mean nothing. When they violated the nine power pact, broke their bond in other words, to the other eight powers that signed that pact, they knew well enough that they were following a chancy course.

The fact the United States navy is always aprowl in the Pacific is another evidence of shirt sleeve diplomacy. It backs up the several inferences to be drawn from Welles' brief pointed statement. Most of the navy has been stationed at Diamond Head ever since the Japanese invaded Manchuria. If memory serves our Pacific fleet received a large addition of warships just about that time. We then protested vigorously and if England had seen the Manchurian invasion in the same light as we did at that time, possible world affairs might have a very different complexion today.

When President Roosevelt declared at a press conference that war in the Pacific would not interfere with the flow of American munitions to Great Britain that was another bit of shirtsleeve diplomacy that any slick diplomat could read in any language. And, we are very certain that there was not the least bit of exaggeration in the statement. Uncle Sam does not need to bluff. Our reserves of materials in all but two or three categories are so tremendous that the belligerent mouthings and postures of misruled and poverty stricken Japan are both impudent and ridiculous.

War in the Pacific is possible but not very probable as events shape up today. Japan waits, just as did Fascist Italy, for an opportune moment to enter the contest on the side of the Axis. The sad plight of Italy, however, may be one of the reasons Japan is proceeding with great care. As long as the major part of the navy remains on guard, we feel reasonably confident that aspirations to make the Pacific a Japanese lake will be balked, even though England were to fall, unless, indeed, the Japanese military oligarchy decides to commit national harikari.

No one can foresee, even though a number of isolationists in the Senate during the debate on the lease-lend bill pretend to omniscience, what may happen on the Atlantic to make the withdrawal of the main body of the fleet from the Pacific imperative. It might be necessary if the Germans succeeded in their invasion of England, or if their submarine blockade gave ultimate promise of accomplishing the same end. Then our Atlantic interests would outweigh those in the Pacific. That is a possible contingency, and it makes all the more urgent the need to pass the lease-lend bill and extend

On Business Here—

Harold Cornish, production contractor for Brown Bros. log trucking firm, visited in this city on business yesterday.

NATIONAL DEFENSE PROGRAM STIMULATES LOGGING INDUSTRY

National defense demands has stimulated the logging business in Nevada County.

The Brown Brothers firm, represented in the county by Harold Cornish of Santa Rosa, is moving between 60 and 80 logs of 55 feet length per day to Oakland, Vallejo and other bay points for national defense construction uses.

The number of logs to be trucked from this area will be speeded up to 100 during the summer months.

Cornish said at present operations are being carried on at the J. H. Scott property in the Blue Tent district. A selective cut is being made with Douglas Fir timber being given preference.

The poles are being used for the foundations and other construction uses at Vallejo and Mare Island, Alameda Naval Air Base, Mills Field, Moffett Field, Hamilton Field and Port of Oakland.

Forest Service Given Scanty Funds, Says Guerdon Ellis

Guerdon Ellis, supervisor of the Tahoe National Forest was today the luncheon speaker at the Rotary club. His topic was timely, since Conservation week begins tomorrow. He spoke on the preservation of our national resources.

Among these resources he listed soil, forests and water. A nation is great, he declared, so long as its natural resources are preserved and fostered. Nations which have wasted their resources have died.

He likened the Forestry Service of this country to the poor miserable, emaciated Oliver Twist in Dickens' story, holding out a lean arm asking Uncle Sam for the money porridge with which to preserve the great resources of our forests and grazing areas in charge of the Forest Service. But Oliver, he said, not like other very fat and slick proteges of the federal government, is steadily having his allowance reduced. Since 1932 the funds for caring for, maindoubled.

A recent survey of the executive officers, twelve in the Tahoe Forest including seven rangers and members of the office staff, revealed the fact that some of them doing nearly twice the work normally required of forest officials, and some were doing three times as much. This means, said Mr. Ellis, that the time is coming when some of them will falter, get sick and become incapaciated.

In the matter of roads in the Tahoe Forest, Mr. Ellis states, only Complaints were filed in the Grass Valley Justice Court today against Dorothy Crawford, Katherine Clemo and John Workman as a result of a dispute over a child of Gus Crawford, who left this county last week for a year's military training.

The charges against the trio were simple assault and were filed by Mrs. Iva Crawford, grandmother of the child.

Mrs. Crawford told the officers the three, Dorothy Crawford, mother of the child, Katherine Clemo and John Workman, reported to be a Grass Valley taxidriver, invaded her home last night and forcefully took the infant. The complaining witness charges she was beaten when she sought to prevent them from taking the child.

His program will include selections from the following:

"Store Choppers" Cause Worry To Registrant

A Grass Valley selective service registrant doesn't want his "store choppers" (false teeth to you) to interfere with his induction into military service.

Here is what he wrote in the space in his questionnaire reserved for the registrant's statement regarding his classification:

"It is commonly gossiped around that anyone with false teeth is bound to be rejected. If this is true, I think the rule is absurd, and ask that you do all you can to place me in some other branch of the service. I understand the army has need of printers, and although not listed in this form, I have had considerable experience along this line. Will furnish a record of the same at your request. All I ask is that I am not rejected.

I'm just as good with my store choppers as Joe Blow with his originals, on which the government will spend some $30 to grind, fill and pull."

Mrs. Bonner Will Again Head Group

Coordinating Council Held Annual Meeting Yesterday

The Nevada City Co-Ordinating Council at their annual organization meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. T. Bonner unanimously decided to ask the city council of this city to ask the Works Progress Administration for an all-year program. The group also re-elected their officers who have been in office since the organization's institution two years ago. They are: Mrs. Edward T. Bonner, President; Fred C. Garrison, Secretary and Mrs. Gertrude M. Odegaard, Financial Chairman. A new office was created this year, that of Vice President and Robert L. Tamblyn was chosen in this position.

For the past two years, this group will is composed of representatives from all of the fraternal and civic organizations of the city, has sponsored summer recreation programs at Pioneer Park for two months of the year.

The project was financially supported by a $250 donation each year from the city council and a balance of approximately $250 from organizations of Nevada City.

In 1939, the first year, Del K. Henrich, a former recreational supervisor of Oakland was chosen as the director of the project. Only one director received a salary, the other being voluntary work by women of the community and officers of the council. Edward A. Frantz, director of athletics at the Nevada City High School was chosen last year and successfully brought the program through the year. Those who have volunteered their work the past two years included Mrs. Arnold Jackson, Mrs. D. S. Bonebrake, Mrs. Clyde M. Gwin, William Wanger, Miss Bonnie Flindt, Mrs. Mabel Flindt and the officers of the club. Mrs. Katherine Robinson also donated her time and services.

Secretary Garrison next week will mail letters to every organization in the city requesting that they send representatives to meet with the coordinators on Wednesday, March 19 at 4 p. m. at the Chamber of Commerce rooms. After this meeting a delegation will appear before the city council at their April meeting to ask for a project similar to that in Grass Valley. At the Wednesday meeting it is hoped that some member of the Grass Valley Recreation Commission will be able to be present to explain the WPA-city program.

Veteran's Organization Takes Lease On Lodge Hall Here

The Banner Mountain Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, last night decided to lease the upstairs lodge rooms of the Morgan and Powell Building as a meeting site of the veterans organization, which was forced to move from its Commercial Street headquarters because of the razing of the building.

The action to lease the lodge room in the Morgan Building will not interfere with the VFW's plans to eventually secure a Veterans Memorial Building for this city, it was announced.

Representatives of Banner Mountain Post appeared before the board of supervisors Tuesday in an endeavor to have the county pay the rental for the building. The supervisors took the position the Veterans Building in Grass Valley was available for the meetings of the veterans group and denied the request to pay the rental on the meeting hall here.

Commander Howard Bennetts announced the lodge hall will be available for meetings and banquets for various organizations. Rental can be made through Bennetts in Grass Valley or George R. Carter here.

A Four-Letter Word

San Francisco has been much agitated recently over so-called "Dead End Kids" and a mounting juvenile delinquency problem. The press and the authorities have engaged in prolonged discussion as to the best course to pursue and how most efficiently to keep young people from committing crimes and other violations of the law which bring them to court or commit them to a reform school.

Herb Caen, columnist for the San Francisco Chronicle, sums the whole thing up in four letters—JOBS. He says what the boys need are tasks to perform wherein they can assist in maintaining their own livelihood. A youngster who has something to do isn't a youngster who takes things he can't rightfully have.

The best way to distract the attention of a baby from crying for the moon is to give it some plaything nearer at hand to occupy its attention. The best way to keep young people from stealing or getting into other mischief is to permit them to earn their own spending money and to learn the value of a dollar.

Certain organizations and individuals have been striving to keep children from any form of endeavor. The most trivial tasks are regarded with suspicion as interfering with their play or their freedom. These reformists refer to any work as child labor, talk of sweatshops and would make the public believe that juvenile toil is harmful to the health and well-being of the youngsters. Exagerated instances are cited to prove their contentions and arouse public opinion against "oppressive child labor."

The newspaper boy and the magazine boy, who put in a few hourse each week, earning spending money have become an object of concern to certain officials and certain clubs or organizations which have been propagandized into cooperating with them. Distributing newspapers is anything but oppressive child labor as any former newsboy well knows. It is a businesslike training in which thrift and self-reliance are taught young people as they reach their early teens.

Certain forms of light tasks fall naturally into the juvenile classification as being proper outlets for the energies and ambitions of young people who want to earn something for themselves.

Carrying newspapers or magazines is in this category and properly regulated and conducted should be so recognized by the authorities. The publishers in California for years have been imposing their own regulations upon their industry and upon the young people who service the public.

The newspaper boy, or magazine boy, is no ragamuffin in tattered clothes who peddles his wares in saloons and haunts the downtown streets. On the contrary he is a well-dressed young businessman, whose health and physical fitness are checked before he is permitted a route or a stack of newspapers to sell or reliver.

The young man learns how to contact the public. He learns how to keep his own accounts. He learns how to handle money and he appreciates its worth. The "Dead-End kids" are not newspaper or magazine boys. They come from the young people who are idle, travel in gangs and steal to get the things they aren't given a chance to earn or secure in normal ways.

Uncle Sam's Coat-Tails

With almost everyone willing to make any reasonable sacrifice to aid in the cause of national defense, it isn't surprising, perhaps, that a few hitch-hikers should appear, trying to hook a free ride on a popular issue. At any rate, the thumb-a-ride boys already have started to show up in congressional and legislative corridors.

At Sacramento, dog-eared, discredited perennials, which crop up at every session, have suddeniy appeared as "national defense bills." And unless legislators and public officials are wary of these old-timers in new attire, California may wake up to the fact, after the session, that more crimes have been committed in the name of national defense than are said to have been committed in the name of justice.

Motorists, for example, who groan and grow profane over slow-moving, heavy-duty trucks, which stall traffic and ruin week-end outings, may find that the highway transports have been tremendously increased in both size and weight—all, ostensibly, in the interest of national defense. For Assembly Bill 1268 now pending, would jump the weight limit on two-axle vehicles from 26,000 pounds to 48,000 pounds, while the big, three-axle trucks, now limited to 34,000 pounds, would also be permitted to carry a gross weight of 48,000 pounds.

If that were required in the interest of national defense, the autoist, regardless of his exasperation, would probably make the best of it. But the fact remains that it isn't. There's another act to take care of the military situation, which will grant any Army or Navy truck, or any hauling for U. S. military forces, free use of California highways regardless of weight or size. But there's always someone, it seems, anxious to hang on to Uncle Sam's coat-tails. That's probably why the poor fellow is so stoop-shouldered!—Contributed.

"France Will Never Die"

Touring California in behalf of his stricken native land is Henri De Vilmorin, a Frenchman who shared in the triumph of other Free Frenchmen in the African campaign last July—a Frenchman who fiercely exclaims: "France will never die."

"Do not say we are dishonored," says this soldier of France. "We have been licked in one fight, but we have not lost the war. What honor we lost by that failure we shall restore. Free France may yet write the most stirring chapter in the history of this war."

There is sadness and regret in this soldier's story, as well as stern resolve. "We did not produce enough, either before the war, or during the war." he admits. "Our miliaary leaders were not capable. not good." But then. proudly. "The French are not divided. The French are not betrayed. They are not loyal to an illegal government which was forced upon them in a moment of panic. We have lost a battle, but not the war!"

No one who has known the French soldier would ever doubt his courage. No one who has listened to Henri De Vilmorin would doubt that France has great patriots, willing to give everything, even to life itself, in defense of country. Yet France failed to produce: France lacked unity of purpose; France had weak leaders. And France was conquered and over-run.

Maybe there is a lesson here for us, as we face the task of preparedness. We are prodigious producers, when occasion demands it; we are capable of great unified effort, if the emergency is great enough, and we can produce men to match our mountains, as we have in every crisis since this nation was first established. Perhaps it's time to take stock of our assets. In some distant day, we don't want to say, half-defiantly: "America will never die!" We just want to say, as we now say, "Long live America!"—Contributed.

Joe Louis, Soldier

Joe Louis, heavyweight champ of the world, expects to be drafted within the next 90 days to fight for Uncle Sam. And for once in his life, the usually calm, reticent, unruffled Brown Bomber is not only excited; he's positively loquacious.

"Sure, I want to be a soldier," laughed Joe. "I'll be a good one, too. I've taken orders for years from my trainer, so I won't have any trouble taking orders in the army."

Then Joe's face sobered and he made the longest speech of his career. "The country is mine as much as anyone else's. I'm proud of my country. It's been good to me, and I want to do my part now that it needs me."

Going in the army at the peak of his fighting career may cost Joe Louis a million dollars. There may be another heavyweight champion, getting the plaudits of the crowd and the fat purses, when Soldier Joe gets his honorable discharge from the United States Army. But Joe said what a lot of other American boys are thinking: "It's my country —and it's been good to me!"—Contributed.

Skiing Is Good Business

California's national forest skiing areas and mass numbers of winter sports participants are contributing to an improved social and economic outlook for the state.

Thus declared Robert S. Monahan of U. S. Forest Service headquarters in Washington, D. C., at the conclusion of a two week's survey of major winter sports developments throughout California forests.

Mr. Monahan, who is touring all national forest skiing areas in the United States. stated in a visit to San Francisco that "California has some of the best skiing terrain and snow conditions anywhere. and is attracting tremendous crowds.

"I am impressed by the volume of business that this popular sport is bringing to all sorts of large and small concerns, in the cities and along transportation routes. But I am even more impressed by the wholesome outlook that a pair of skis, deep snow and our winter area developments help provide for so many outdoor enthusiasts."

as soon as possible that help to the hard-pressed British that may save us from sacrificing our trade relations in the Pacific.

In the meantime we are not so disturbed as many commentators seem to be, over the delay in Senate action on the lease-lend bill. For we feel reasonably certain, from occasional bits of news dispatches, that aid to Britain is going forward in good volume anyhow. And in the meantime, the President is getting all set to carry forward the work of putting more steam into the country's productive effort, and will undoubtedly be ready to act the moment the bill becomes law. Senators Nye, Johnson, Wheeler, and others we surmise have nearly shot their wad. A few days might make a great difference in the result to be sure, but we think the date for an invasion attempt has been indefinitely postponed by Herr Hitler, who now proposes, so far as we can judge, to attempt starvation before the final sally across the channel.

But timeliness is essential in our aid. Of that we can be very certain, and upon our aid to Britain, does depend not only future relations in the Atlantic, but also those in the Pacific, and for that matter, the wide world around.

COMMONWEALTH CLUB WOULD BAN EXPORTS TO JAPS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—An immediate embargo on United States trade with Japan in military supplies, oil, automotive equipment, or "any products which would benefit the Japanese economy," including imports of raw silk and cotton manutures, was urged today by the Commonwealth Club of California.

The club opposed renewal of the Japanese trade treaty at this time, but favored its renewal "when desirable in the opinion of the State Department," and favored "entering into a reciprocal trade agreement with Japan following cessation of hostilities."

The club also favored the policy of loans and sale of military supplies to China.

In the other half of a double barreled ballot of the club's membership completed today, the club endorsed a plan for county administration of unemployment relief and other welfare services, with state supervision and joint state-county financing.

Prior to the club's vote, pro-and-con reports on both subjects were published and mailed to all club members. The report on trade with Japan followed a year long study by the Pacific Ocean Commerce Section while the report on relief was the result of a year's sutdy by the Section on Municipal and County Government.

Hearing Set To Determine Status Of Mine Leaders

SACRAMENTO, Mar. 5—(U.P.)—A U. S. labor department hearing to determine whether miners who lease and operate mines are employes under the fair labor standards act will be held in Salt Lake City March 18, Bruce McDonell, state mining board executive secretary, announced today.

Terms of lease agreements, compensation of leasees, working conditions and handling and disposition of ore mined under lease agreements will be taken into consideration in determining status of the miners, McDonell announced.

Dorothy M. Williams of San Francisco, regional attorney for the wage and hour division of the department of labor, will conduct the hearing.

WITH YOUR ASSEMBLYMAN THURMAN AT THE STATE CAPITOL

The 54th session of the state legislature reconvened on Monday following the constitutional recess of the past five weeks. Your legislators will now get down to the work of deciding how many of the some 4000 measures are worthy of consideration before the 2 houses of the legislature. Many of the various bills will undoubtedly be killed in their respective committee, thus saving the legislature the trouble of having to consider such legislation on the floor. In the writers opinion, a measure must have some merit if it gets as far as the daily calendar during this session.

THURMAN

Your assemblyman returns to his desk in the lower house feeling that he has considerably more knowledge about the affairs of government, than he previously had. This additional knowledge was gained last week as we sat with the ways and means committee which held hearings on the proposed administration budget. All department and bureau heads with their accountants sat with the committee during the past week for a thorough going over of their respective budgets for the coming two years. All budgeted items for additional employees and additional expense were thoroughly discussed and will be given additional consideration by the committee before it passes the budget bill to the floor. We feel quite fortunate in being selected a member of this committee, the work of which is most enlightening.

As a result of this committee work of the past week and its continued study of the budget, it is safe to say that at least twenty millions of dollars will be cut from the budget. One item, the relief allocation of nearly $38,000,000, was stricken from the budget and a special appropriation bill will be introduced to take care of relief on a yearly budget basis. It was brought out in the committee hearings that more than 8000 relief cases had been dropped in recent months and with the national defense program giving employment to many persons who heretofore have been on relief, the committee believes that with the relief picture so uncertain, it is best to allocate funds one year at a time rather than attempt to forecast the relief case load two years in advance.

It is certain to be the attitude of the ways and means committee that the state has too many separate departments and bureaus with the result that legislation will undoubtedly be introduced to consolidate some of the bureaus and agencies, thereby cutting down expense of operation with a saving to the tax payers.

Propaganda has become quite an issue and it is possible that legislation will be introduced to eliminate some of the high priced publicity experts who have in recent years been added to the payroll. The practice of employing departmental publicity personnel has been rapidly expanding in recent years to publicize the activities, policies and programs of an administration. While the present administration is not responsible for all of the propaganda specialists on the payroll, this type of state employee has increased more rapidly during the past two years.

It was enlightening to the committee last week when one department head told the members that he was dubious of the benefits to be derived from employing a publicity agent to ballyhoo the activities of his department, which incidently, is in charge of the hospitals and insane ayslums of the state. The item in the budget for the creation of this new job at the taxpayers expense totaled $6060 for a two year period. The creation of the new job was not his wish ,the department head stated but had been suggested by the administration.

So whether you like it or not Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, you are paying good money for a lot of ballyhoo that many legislators believe could be dispensed with.

STATE EXPENSES AT NEW PEAK

SACRAMENTO, Mar. 6.—(UP)—The State of California took in an average of $22,466,209 a month during the last fiscal year, and the total for the 12-month period, $269,594,616, was the largest in history, State Controller Harry B. Riley reported today.

The year's aggregate income was $15,607,258 greater than the previous record of $253,987,358 established in the 1938-39 fiscal period.

The cost of state government during the past year was $298,823,242, leaving an out-of-pocket deficit of nearly $30,000,000 Riley pointed out. Since the close of the fiscal year last June 30, however, business conditions have improced greatly and the state's fiscal affairs are looking more rosy.

The greatest source of revenue was the retail sales tax, which yielded $93,773,337 for the year, and the second largest return came from the gasoline and diesel fuel tax, amounting to $51,143,811.

Other major items of income were bank and corporation franchise taxes $20,436,074; personal income taxes, $19,571,722; alcoholic beverage revenues, $15,994,038; motor vehicle fees and licenses, $14,660,086; motor vehicle "in lieu" property tax, $12,842,072; inheritance tax, $10,529,966; insurance companies tax, $7,822,569; horse racing revenue, $2,810,246, and motor transportation taxes and licenses, $2,571,178.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder when you learned to love
The birds, the trees and flowers
And find in their companionship
Delight for lingering hours;
And were you taught to treasure them
As part of Nature's plan,
To be regarded and preserved
As gracious gifts to man?

I wonder if winter will upset precedent this year and depart early leaving us to the devices of spring, or will he observe tradition and time his exit for March twenty-first.

I wouldn't dare offer a prediction, for several times in the past, when led to believe that winter was about to yield, I have yodeled, "spring is here," only to find that in reality winter had started a filibuster with all the powers of snow, frost, pelting rain and howling winds at his command. I don't trust the old gentleman now, I wait until the twenty first of March and then, even though young spring may seem a bit coy, I know she is here.

In a world, so much of which is enveloped in clouds of ugliness, it will be our privilege to walk through the magic loveliness of a California springtime. Moreover, we may, if we so desire, garner much of this loveliness and make it our own to have and to hold. How? Oh, in various ways; the camera expert will use his camera, the artist his brushes, some there are who will sally forth with careless glances and with clutching hand that break, pull, tear and destroy; this latter method is not a good one, for treasures collected thoughtlessly soon fade, are thrown away and forgotten.

If we are wise, we will capture the beauty of springtime by taking time to see and feel the enchantment of the young singing year, and using the arts of understanding and appreciation, impress it upon our memories where it will live for an indefinite period of time, unchanged and glowingly radiant.

Some one once said, "all sails look white across the sea of years." Those words are true, how white indeed are the little grey sails we saw upon some joyful occasion long ago, and oh, how heavenly blue the tawny sea on which they moved. And so it is that scenes which we cherish—the far flung landscape, a sylvan bower or the fragile sweetness of wildwood flowers, will not fade and grow dull with the passing of years; enshrined in memory their beauty will remain, ours to have and to hold.

I wonder what the founding fathers would do if they were in command today. Truly, their work was well done in their own day and generation; but what would they do now that the world has become so small and so troubled? I'd like to see George Washington, Henry Clay, John Paul Jones and other heroes of the past, walk into our midst today—but how long would it take them to catch up with the times, grasp the difficulties of modern problems here and abroad, and decide what to do about everything.

FAMOUS NEGRO SOPRANO WILL SING IN SACTO.

Dorothy Maynor, young Negro soprano who is the singing sensation of the current musical season, will be heard in Sacramento on March 29th at the Memoria Auditorium. Virtually unknown a few months ago, her rise to fame is one of the rare success stories in our musical history.

Her discovery by Serge Koussevitsky, of the famed Boston Symphony is an exciting tale in itself. Miss Maynor attended a musicale given by the famous leader for his personal friends. She was urged to sing with the orchestra and started with difficult German lieder, then arias from Handel and Mozart and finally difficult passages from "Die Walkue." This select audience was thrilled and excited, describing her rich voice as one of the finest in a generation.

A native of Norfolk, Virginia, and daughter of a minister, Miss Maynor received her first musical experience in the choir of her father's church. At fourteen she entered the Hampton Institute where she sang in the famous chorus. She planned to become a music teacher but music lovers who heard her sing urged her to study in New York. She gave a brilliant New York recital in November and appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during that same month.

It has been a sudden and spectacular rise for this young singer who now who finds many cities clamoring for her concerts. And her concert in Sacramento will be a rare treat for Northern California music lovers. Tickets are on sale now at the Ware-Hazelton box office in Weinstock-Lubin's.

The U. S. Army will be spending $750,000 daily for food by July 1, according to present estimates.

MEXICO AGAIN TOURIST MECCA

Touring in Mexico by motorists from the United States is rapidly rising again toward its former volume with the passing of the turbulent Mexican political conditions which for a time caused travel over the border to diminish sharpy, reports the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association.

"With the return of quiet in the internal affairs of Mexico there has been a steadily increasing flow of motor tourist travel into that country for a number of months past," the motorists' organization stated.

"The pleasures of spectacular scenery, interesting customs and folkways and a most cordial welcome to a land of old world interest await the motorist who goes touring now in Mexico.

"Removal of the former uncertainties was signalized recently by the American Aptomobile Association in a special bulletin to its 725 affiliated motor clubs and branches throughout the United States and Canada giving the 'all clear' signal on travel to Mexico. The effect of this action is to turn off the yellow 'caution' light and give the green 'go' signal on motoring over our southern border.

"All indications are that, with the removal of threats of disturbance, travel to Mexico will increase to new records. The previous record was established in 1937 when more than 30,000 cars carrying nearly 100,000 persons passed over the border at Laredo, Texas, proceeding over the new modern highway to Mexico City. That highway is now in excellent condition all the way to Mexico City and beyond. It is an all weather highway, in contrast to many other roads in Mexico which are advisable only in dry weather. Now is the dry season in Mexico and hence the time for making a motor tour there. The rainy season extends from May to October."

BELLEFONTAINE, O. (U. P.)—Mrs. Harry Chandler, of Lewistown, gave birth to twins in different Ohio towns. The first-born, a girl, was delivered at her mother-in-law's home in De Graff. Exactly two hours later a son was born to Mrs. Chandler in a hospital here, 12 miles west.

Politically Speaking

By JOHN W. DUNLAP
United Press Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, March 6.—(U. P.)—Taxpayers are so accustomed to tax increases that even the mention of a move to lower taxes becomes news.

So it was when the legislature came back to Sacramento and almost immediately got into a wrangle with Governor Olson on the relative merits of lowering taxes.

JOHN DUNLAP

The basic arguments are rather simple. The "economy bloc" in the legislature feels that increased national spending and larger state revenues should be passed on to the taxpayers. The governor believes it is better to keep taxes the same and retire some of the state's deficit.

Olson promises to veto any tax reduction bill that reaches his desk, but if the momentum is strong enough, the membership might override the veto.

When the governor made up his budget, the state department of finance supplied predictions that boosted revenues would not only balance the budget but retire the sizeable deficit and leave a surplus of $11,000,000. Olson said there were several "ifs" in this situation, enough so that it would not be advisable to tamper with tax structures. He said any surplus would act as a "cushion" if there should be a slump in business in a year or two with consequent unemployment."

The would be tax cutters have their arguments, too. Gordon Garland, assembly speaker, summed it up by declaring it was not healthy for state government to have a surplus because it would be an incentive for spending. Garland said it would be better to make a horizontal cut in taxes—with the possible exception of the sales tax, which has provoked the most argument—for a period of two years, then restore the present rates if necessary.

Chairman Rodney Turner of the assembly revenue and tax committee favored a quick passage "so the governor can veto them and the issue can go to the people quickly." He favored a cut in the higher personal income brackets and further exemptions in the sales tax.

Senator Ed Tickle said a survey was being conducted on all tax and revenue measures to see if cuts could be made safely in the tax structure. "A majority of the members of the legislature are economy minded, and we will make up our minds as to their merits regardless of what the governor contends."

The governor emphasized he was not opposed to the theory of tax reduction but felt this was not the right time to do it. He said it would be better to strive to balance the budget and then use any surplus revenues to retire state bonds and reduce fixed charges.

Olson said he might be induced to approve further exemptions from the sales tax if conditions warrant it later, such as removing the tax from clothing, drugs, farm tools and the other necessities. But he was steadfastly against any move to lower personal income, bank or corporation franchise levies.

The legislators know enough politics to realize the difficulty in raising taxes once they have been lowered. That is why a stipulation would be added to have the reduced rates in effect only two years.

The fight over taxes is somewhat different than the situation two years ago when Olson was seeking higher and new taxes in an effort to cut down the mounting deficit. The legislature granted only a small non-controversial gift tax and scuttled all the rest. No one could tell then that the national defense boom would pump so much money into California but at least it gave the governor's opponents a chance to say "I told you so."

FOREST SERVICE

taining the forests and protecting this great natural asset of all the people have been steadily reduced, while the work has generally been $7.500 is allowed to take care of 1-500 miles. To do even a fair job of taking care of them, he stated, the Tahoe Forest should have $45,000. These roads are used by farmers, miners, stockmen and sportsmen, and it is practically impossible to keep them in a passable state.

There are 400 miles of telephone lines in Tahoe Forest and last year, not one cent was allowed in the forest budget for maintaining these lines. He explained that under an arrangement with the military authorities in San Francisco, a defense plan has been adopted through which lookouts stations instantly report any airplanes that fly over, and within two or three minutes the army headquarters are apprised of the planes, their location and the direction of their flight, all through the use of the forest telephone system.

Of course, Mr. Ellis said, we did take care of the telephones, through a process of robbing Peter to pay Paul. We took men off fire duty to mend lines. In a heavy winter area such as this wires and poles are bound to suffer in mountain storms and repairs must be made, not only for service in case of accidents, fires and for business purposes, but now, to complete our defense preparations.

During the year, there are now a half million people who visit the Tahoe National Forest. This is equal to those who visit the Yosemite. Of the visitors in this area 200,000 come for the snow sports and 300,000 during the other seasons of the year. Constant improvement is needed in the forest area to care for this great number of visitors, but under present conditions this is impossible, Mr. Ellis declared.

Mark Yich Foo, Former Local Chinese Merchant Dies At 96

The death of Mark Yick Foo, for many years a Chinese businessman and resident of Nevada City, occurred recently in San Francisco. Word of his death reached this city this week. William Hoy, a writer for the California Chinese Press, wrote an obituary on Mark Yick Foo. It follows:

By WILLIAM HOY

Without fanfare of any kind, with not even a press notice in Chinatown's native language papers, a pioneer California Chinese in our midst passed away just the other day. His aged was ninety-six. He was the grandfather of the Hings we know so well, Fred and Charlie and Walter Hing.

He was Mark Yick Foo, who for two generations was known and respected in the Chinatowns of Sacramento Marysville, Grass Valley, Washington and Nevada City. Particularly was he known in the two latter places because he passed the better part of his life there as a gold mine owner, gold dust buyer and merchant. There he was called also by his other name, Mark Pon Lung, or by his store name, Hee Kee.

Central Pacific Railroad Era

Born in 1945 in the Toyshan district, Canton, Mark emigrated to California at 24, at the time when the Central Pacific railroad was being completed by the toil of 10,000 Chinese laborers. His clan had few brethren among the California Chinese but Mark Yick Foo made his way.

A few years in San Francisco, then he went on to Sacramento, where work was plentiful in Chinese farms and orchards. Followed some dabbling at gold mining in Folsom. He didn't have the magic touch, but he acquired something better. He found a wife.

Yuba City was next on his itinerary. He toiled hard. But before long he came to the conclusion that affluence was to be gained only by becoming a merchant. California was growing and every boat from China that docked at 'Frisco brought more Cantonese here. Mark moved on to Auburn, then Truckee accumulating his savings and dabbling in small trades.

Two decades passed. Then one day, with his wife and son, Mark trudged down miles of dusty trails somewhere in Nevada County and came upon the town of Washington It was the 1880's and gold mining was still going on in that spot, hemmed in by mountains and covered with pines. A Chinatown nestled there and its three thousand celestials were mining the various bars and flats and the bed of the Yuba river. The Grass Wire Bar and the Grissell Bar, particularly were honeycombed with Chinese miners.

Fortune Smiled at Last

At last fortune smiled on Mark Yick Foo. A little provision store he set up waxed prosperous. A mining claim he bought at a bargain yielded profits. The gold dust and nuggets flowed into the Chinatowns of Sacramento and 'Frisco in exhange for China rice and other Chinese staples. The twin stars of prosperity and posterity shone on him, for three grand sons were born to him.

A quarter of a century passed and gold petered out in Washington. The miners fled. So did the Chinese. The first World War raged in Europe, but its echo failed to disturb the growing somnolence of this hamlet.

Mark moved his family and store to the neighboring town of Nevada City. He set up the Hee Kee store in Chinatown on Commercial street, and continued his role of merchant and gold dust buyer.

Trail's End

By that time the tail end of California's gold era had passed and the Chinatowns all along the Mother Lode were giving up their ghosts. In the 1920s Mark established his family in San Francisco, but he himself stayed in Nevada City. Even when his store closed a decade ago he remained within its familiar interior, stocked with herbs and wines, rice papers, ink-stones and tobacco pipes. He was part of the quiet, rugged splendor of the Sierra foothills and the city held no glamour for him.

But at last, two years ago, he was finally persuaded to join his family here. Fred Hing, one of the grandsons, went up and gathered the now aged Mark's belongings. These included a magnificent scale he had and privately regretted that Fred could not also bring out the brick used for years in weighing gold. I happened to be in Nevada City at the time combing for historical data, gold smelter in the back of the Hee Kee store. My thought was that this smelter would make a substantial item in an exhibition of California's Chinese relics.

When Mark Yick Foo died the other day he had perpetuated his name here through four generations.

Taxes Paid By Mining Company Last Year Was Equal To 96 Per Cent Of Net Profit

Lon Hughes, financial editor of the San Francisco Examiner, in his column the other day took cognizance of the predicament—regarding taxes—of the gold mining industry.

The article which is of interest to the mining industry of this district quotes the management of the Dayton Consolidated Mines Company at length. Hughes' story follows:

Most of us hear so many complaints about high taxes that we might be forgiven for becoming a little cynical until, or unless, the seriousness of a situation is driven home.

The management of Dayton Consolidated Mines Company, Virginia City, Nevada, writes to explain its tax plight (which probably also is similar to that of many marginal mining compaiies.)

Dayton's situation is explained as follows:

"Our records show that we have paid, or are liable for, a total of $62,423 in taxes to local, state and federal agencies against 1940 operations.

"This represents 10.3 per cent of the gross value of production from the company's own properties; 34.95 per cent of our operating profit before depreciation and depletion allowances; 61.35 per cent of our profit after these necessary charges, and is equal to 96 per cent of our net profit after all charges — including taxes.

"Moreover, this is an increase over 1939 of 63 per cent in local and 220 per cent in federal taxes, as compared with an increase of 78 per cent in operating profit.

"These figures, when translated into charges per ton of ore handled during the year, show that taxes represent a charge of 71 cents a ton on all ore—including custom ore—treated during the year. When applied to company ore alone, these charges total $1.15 a ton. Since our net profit, after all allowances and taxes, is shown to be 74 cents a ton of all ore handled, you will realize that our margin of profit is entirely too close for comfort, and that further increases in taxes, or even a slight decline in ore value, could easily have the effect of a complete discontinuance of our effort, and that of others similarly situated.

"When it is considered that during the year employment was given by us directly to an average of 175 men (now 200), and indirectly to at least an equal number through custom ore shippers; that $324,544 was paid in salaries and wages, and ..that ..expenditures for stores, supplies and power totaled $173,269, you will appreciate, we believe, that operations such as those of this company are of some importance to the community in which its operations are centered, to the state—and even to the nation."

JACK BENNY IN SONG COMEDY ON SCREEN SUNDAY

Musical hits are heard all through "Love Thy Neighbor," that mad and merry musical comedy which plays Sunday and Monday at the Nevada Theatre, co-starring those two great comedians Jack Benny and Fred Allen, as well as Mary Martin. Three popular tunes are "Do You Know Why" "Isn't That Just Like Love," and "Dearest, Dearest I" written by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, are in the hit parade. Mary Martin sings the song "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," that she made famous on Brodaway in "Leave It to Me." In between these popular songs Jack Benny and Fred Allen continue their feud in a battle of quips guaranteed to keep an audience in stitches. Featured with them are Veree Teasdale, Virginia Dale, The Merry Macs, the Merriel Abbott dancers and Rochester. "Love Thy Neighbor" was produced and directed by Mark Sandrich for Paramount from an original screen play by William Morrow, Edmund Beloin, Ernest Pagano and Z. Myers.

Historic Commercial Street Buildings To Soon Be Memories

The razing of the row of five buildings on the lower end of Commercial Street started this week. The work is being done under the direction of Julio Panelli.

After the buildings are torn down and the ground cleared, it is probable a parking lot will be created.

The buildings are among historical landmarks of this city. The decision to raze them was reached by F. F. Cassidy, the owner, after the city had threatened to condemn them

The five stores were formerly owned by the Searls family and it is believed they were erected in the 1870's by the late Niles Searls, the grandfather of the present Searls brothers, Fred, Niles, Carroll, Henry and Robert.

The Friday meeting of the Nevada City Ski Club has been postponed this week for two reasons, President Dwight Steele announced today.

The reasons are:

Dr. Frank Howard of San Rafael, who was to speak and show skiing pictures, will be unable to come to Nevada City at the present.

The club did not want to interfere with the entertainment to be held at the Nevada City High School tomorrow night.

Steele said Dr. Howard will appear here later in the month. On March 14th pictures of skiing at Sun Valley will be shown.
